

ONE DRIVEN TO WEDLOCK; THE OTHER CROWDED OUT

Miss Williams Alleges That Ed-brooke Scared Her Into Matrimony.

COURT ANNULS MARRIAGE

Mr. Jones Fled With Mrs. J. No. 1 While Mrs. J. No. 2 Sought Warrant.

Two women had their marriages annulled in the Supreme Court yesterday on testimony somewhat out of the ordinary.

One decree was granted in a suit by Dorothy L. Williams, 20 years old, through her father, Edward L. Williams, as guardian ad litem, against George H. Edbrooke, a civil engineer, living at the Hotel Seville. Mr. Williams is connected with the Pacific Bank and lives at 430 West 116th street.

The other was in the suit of Amalia Scherer Jones against Daniel Webster Jones, now a hotel proprietor in Denver, who got her decree because of an encounter she had with another Mrs. Jones.

Miss Williams had her marriage, at Norwalk, Conn., on September 19, 1911, annulled on the ground of force, duress and fraud. She said she first met Edbrooke in Brooklyn in 1907, when she was 15 years old and he was 20. He became infatuated with her, and because he was so much older than the boys she knew, she thought she was in love with him. Then she got to wondering whether he would support her properly, she said, and she had doubts of her love for him. He insisted that she marry him, and she finally asked her parents to move from Brooklyn to get her away from Edbrooke.

While she was visiting in Brooklyn in March, 1910, Miss Williams testified, Edbrooke intercepted her in the rain and prevailed on her to run away with him to Montreal and be married. She changed her mind about marriage, because her mother was in feeble health, and went back home as soon as she could.

Edbrooke came to her home on June 1, 1910, at Bretton Hall and showed a revolver in the public parlor, saying he would kill himself and Miss Williams if she didn't marry him. Her mother heard of it and had an attack of heart failure that made it necessary to take her to a sanitarium.

Miss Williams said she was in Ridge-wood, N. J., on September 18, 1911, visiting a friend. Edbrooke followed her and met her on a country road. He told Miss Williams he would kill her and himself right there and that nothing she could say would stop him.

"I was afraid and pleaded with him," testified Miss Williams, "but I thought he would carry out his threat, and I expected at any time to hear a shot."

Miss Williams said that when she got home a girl friend told her Edbrooke was threatening to tell her mother all about his plan to shoot Miss Williams and himself. To prevent his doing it, Miss Williams declared, she met him and went to Norwalk to be married, but she left him when they got back to the city and didn't see him again.

Mrs. Williams testified in behalf of her daughter too.

Mrs. Amalia Scherer Jones said she married Daniel Webster Jones in Jersey City in 1900 and that one night a woman came to her home, pointed to Jones's picture on the wall and to a little girl by her side, and said: "That is my husband, and this is his little girl."

"Well, he is my husband too," replied the plaintiff.

"But I married him in a church in Baltimore in 1903," said the caller.

"Well, I married him too. So what are you going to do?" was the rejoinder.

"Well, I married him first," the woman with the child insisted, "and naturally, he is my husband."

Mrs. Jones said that while she and her visitor were having an argument about whose husband Jones was he came in. When it was put up to him, she alleged, he said: "Yes, I married her," indicating the new claimant, "but if I support you (meaning Mrs. Amalia Jones), what are you going to do about it? You can't do anything."

"I'll see what I can do," said the plaintiff. And she went out and found a policeman.

She testified that she was directed to the Jefferson Market court for a bigamy warrant, but was told she would have to bring the first Mrs. Jones along. When she tried to find her the New York Mrs. Jones learned that the Baltimore Mrs. Jones had left town and taken her husband with her.

The Parades

by land and water are over now, for a time, but there still remains the necessity for parading one's business where it will have the best display and be seen by the most of the right kind of people—probable buyers.

Intending buyers—those specially on shopping bent—favor the New York City Surface Cars because they transport them—and transfer them where necessary—from the home to the store and back with the least necessity for walking.

Shoppers appreciate this convenience and are interested in—and believers in—the advertising they see in the Surface Cars. They have the utmost confidence in it because they know it is rigorously censored for the public benefit.

You will find the New York City Surface Cars the best medium in which to parade your claims to public attention. The test will prove the assertion.
